Competitions guide

Trampoline Tariff Calculator · https://tariff.pardy.ie

Routines are built and checked in the Routine Builder: see the routine builder guide.

Competitions collect every gymnast's card before the day, each checked against its level, so the difficulty judges don't have to. They're at https://tariff.pardy.ie/competitions. The calculator doesn't link there yet.

There are no accounts. Each person gets a private link instead: whoever has it can use that page, so keep yours to yourself, and don't post anyone else's in a group chat. Every link you get is saved in that browser, and tariff.pardy.ie/competitions lists them all (competitions you run, clubs you run, your clubs, clubs you coach, your own entries). Two competitions or clubs with the same name are both kept; a link that turns out to lead nowhere (a competition deleted, a link replaced) is dropped from the list when you open it, and its page has a way back to the list. On another phone, open the link itself; copy it somewhere safe with Copy when you get it.

To try it first, there's a sandbox at https://sandbox.tariff.pardy.ie/sandbox: a copy full of made-up clubs and gymnasts, with one competition open for entries and one on the day. Its start page, Try it as..., has a link for each role (organiser, helper, club admin, someone in a club with a role, coach, member, gymnast on their own, the venue screen). Change anything: it's all put back from time to time. Notifications don't work there: nothing in it is emailed or pushed.

Who does what:

- The organiser creates the competition and sees every entry.
- A club's competition secretary (comp sec) creates the club, enters it in competitions and sends the members' entries. Whoever creates the club is its club admin, and gives each person who helps (a treasurer, a team manager) a link with a role that says what they can do.
- Members join their club and keep their own entries.
- Coaches sign off their members' routines, if the competition asks.
- A gymnast without a club can enter on their own, if the organiser allows.

A competition can offer several disciplines: individual trampoline, synchro, tumbling and DMT, each at its own levels. A gymnast can enter several. A synchro pair enters one routine, the level's voluntary, checked like a trampoline routine; tumbling and DMT entries are a level only, for now.

Routines come from the Routine Builder: build each voluntary there first, on the same phone, then choose it when entering. With none yet, the entry form's Open the Routine Builder → opens it with ← go back to your entry at the top, to choose the routine once it's built. A set routine needs nothing: it's performed as written.

1. Run a competition (organisers)

1. Go to tariff.pardy.ie/competitions and tap New competition.
2. Fill in the Name, the Date and when Entries close (Irish and UK time). Tick the Levels gymnasts can enter; your own levels from the Routine Builder are under Your own levels.
3. Under Synchro, tumbling and DMT, tick any synchro levels, and type the tumbling and DMT levels, one a line, easiest first. Leave them empty for trampoline only. To run synchro levels together, pair them, one event a line: "BUCS L1 + BUCS L2" makes one event, "Synchro BUCS L1/L2", where each pair says which level they're doing.
4. Choose when Entries open: when you go live (the competition stays private while you set it up), at a set time, or now.
5. Choose whether gymnasts can also enter on their own, whether to ask for video proof (none, some skills such as any triple, or each whole routine), whether entries need a coach's sign-off, and whether to rank men and women separately (you can choose only some levels later).
6. Tap Create competition. You land on the entries page with your admin link. Save it: it's the only way back, and anyone who has it can manage the competition.
7. Open Settings (in the menu at the top) for the club link (give it to each club's comp sec) and the link for entering on their own (give it to gymnasts without a club). You can share them while the competition is private: they show its name, date and when entries open, but nobody can enter yet.
8. When you're ready, tap Go live now, or set a date and time for it to go live by itself. Make private (pause entries) under Going live on the Settings page stops entries again; the entries already made are kept.

Finding your way round. Every page of the organiser's section has a menu under its title: Entries, Timetable, On the day (once the timetable is published) and Settings. Tap a section to open it; its own pages are listed under the bar, with the page you're on marked. Entries has All entries, People, Late changes, Coaches (when you approve coaches) and Fees, with a count beside Late changes and Coaches when something waits for you. Timetable has Flights (the timetable itself), Setup, Officials, Simulate and the two "what if" pages. On the day has Areas (the day's page), Desk messages and the Venue screen. Settings has Competition (the settings themselves) and History. On a phone the bar scrolls sideways: its edge fades, with a small arrow, where there's more. A helper's link shows only the sections it can open.

The entries page shows the counts, then a table for each event (a level, or "Synchro BUCS L3", "Tumbling Novice"): gymnast (both names for a synchro pair), club, each exercise, requirements met, problems, video and coach sign-off where asked, when it was sent, and whether you've checked it. To find entries: search for a gymnast (accents, case and spaces don't matter, so "marykate" finds Mary Kate, and synchro partners count), filter by club, coach (or no coach), checked or not, signed off or not, video, men or women, or Problems only, and sort by club, gymnast, latest sent or coach. The filters stay in the page's address, so you can bookmark or share a view; Print and Download CSV, below the entries, use them too. The page opens on the entries; the competition's dates and counts are at the bottom. With many filters, they're under Filters, which says how many are on. Each choice says how many entries it would leave ("UCD (12)"), and one that would leave none is greyed out. The filters you've chosen are listed under the search ("Club: UCD ×"): tap one to take it off. Each event's table starts folded (tap its heading to open it) and says how many of its entries are shown ("12 of 96"); Columns chooses which columns show (Sent is hidden until you tick it, so the rest fit a laptop's screen) and can clip long text to one line, and dragging the edge of a heading makes a column wider or narrower; a table's edge fades where there's more to scroll to. The Coach column names the coach and says Signed off, Needs changes or Waiting; an asterisk after a coach's name means they aren't approved to sign off for this competition, so their sign-off doesn't count. Expand all opens every one (it then reads Collapse all, to fold them again), and your browser remembers which you left open. A search or filter opens the events it finds people in. Tap a gymnast to see both exercises in full (a synchro pair's one routine), checked as the Routine Builder checks them.

- Mark checked once you're happy, with a note for the club or gymnast if something needs fixing ("element 7 repeats element 3"). If they change the entry, it needs checking again. Mark checked and next opens the next entry to check. Your search, filters and sort go with you: the next entry is the next one they show, and ← Entries takes you back to the list as you left it, at the entry you were on.

- Video: open each video (it opens in a new tab), then Video OK or Need more with a note of what's missing.

- Print opens a menu: Cards prints a competition card per exercise, filled in, for everyone shown, and Cards not checked the entries you haven't checked. More than a hundred cards come a level at a time (a big level by category, "BUCS L7 · Men"): choose one, print it, then Next; Every level on one page prints them all at once, from a computer; one level's are inside the open level (Print this level's cards; a level where men and women rank apart is listed as two, "BUCS L7 · Men" and "BUCS L7 · Women", each with Print these cards), and one gymnast's on their page (Print card). Save as PDF from the print dialog for one file. A chair of judges' link finds the timetable's sheets in the same menu.

- Download CSV gives every entry shown for a spreadsheet or scoring system: each exercise (what it's checked against, "not done in synchro" for synchro's first, "level only" for tumbling and DMT) with its difficulty, how many problems and, in the last column, what they are.

- On the Settings page (a page of its own, with a list at the top to jump to each group) each setting is a line saying how it's set, with Change to open it. You can change when entries close or Close entries now, change the synchro, tumbling and DMT levels, put the levels in order (Order of levels, easiest first: built-in levels start in order, so check where your own levels sit), choose which levels rank men and women separately, turn entering on their own, video proof or coach sign-off on or off, Replace the admin link if it's been shared too widely, or delete the competition. Replacing asks first, at the top of Settings: the old link stops working at once for everyone who has it, wherever it's saved (your helpers' links keep working). Deleting needs the word delete typed in a box, so it can't happen by accident.

- Links for your helpers (under Links on the Settings page): tap Make a link, name it (who it's for) and choose what it can do: Checking cards (for difficulty judges: check cards, add notes, review videos), Chairs of judges (see the entries and print the chair of judges, score and marshal sheets), Timetable and officials, Venue screen (for a screen at the venue: what's on each area now and next, and nothing else; see On the day below), or Everything but links and deleting (a co-organiser). Copy the link straight away: it's shown only once. Remove stops it working, once you say yes at the top of the page. History lists every change, when, and which link made it.

- Changes and sign-off after entries close (under Entries and deadlines on the Settings page): entries closing stops new entries; give Changes to entries close and Coaches' sign-off closes later dates to let clubs and gymnasts keep changing, withdrawing or sending again the entries they've made, and coaches keep signing off, until then.

- Late changes: tap Late changes to choose what clubs and gymnasts can ask for once entries close (a level change, a routine change, or both), each with a fee charged only if you accept. Each request shows whether it fits: the new card's problems, whether the new level is full, and where it would go in the draft timetable and what that moves. Accept applies it (it needs checking and signing off again, goes into the draft timetable for you to publish, and the fee goes on their invoice) or say why it's Not accepted. Members, comp secs and individuals ask with Ask for a late change on their pages. Where entries need sign-off, tick A coach must sign off a late change before it comes to you: the coach signs off the new card first (on their coach page, or an individual's coach through the sign-off link), and accepting carries that sign-off onto the entry.

- Limits and waiting lists (on the Settings page): give an event a limit and, once it's full, later entries go on its waiting list in the order they came in. The next one moves up by itself when an entry is withdrawn or removed, or you raise the limit; Let in takes someone in over the limit. Clubs and gymnasts see their place ("waiting list, 3rd"); waiting entries aren't counted, charged, printed or timetabled. A change of limits that lets entries in from a waiting list, or moves entries already in onto one, asks first, naming who.

- Fees: tap Fees to set what you charge (euro or sterling, an amount per entry for each discipline, a synchro pair counting as one, and a club fee if you have one) and how to pay. Each club and individual is listed with what's due, paid and left; record payments as they come (Record a payment, with the amount and a note), and print each one's Invoice. Remove beside a payment recorded by mistake asks first, at the top of the page. Clubs see what they owe on the competition's Fees tab of their club page, with their invoice; individuals on their entry. Removed, held and withdrawn entries aren't charged.

- Messages and concerns: members, coaches, comp secs and gymnasts on their own can Tell the organiser something from their pages for the competition ("my surname is spelled wrong on the timetable"), with their name and club, and the entries or events it's about if they choose (how). Anyone with one of your links can Flag a concern, about an entry or generally ("element 7 isn't on the card"). A chip at the top of the entries page says how many are open and goes to them, listed at the foot of the page, each with who sent it. A message says Waiting for you until you answer: tap Received to let them know you have it, Reply to write back (they see it on their page, and hear by push or email if they've asked to), and Resolve when it's done, with a reply for them and a note for yourself, both optional (they never see the note). They can add to it, and more from them opens it again. Those resolved fold away beneath. To stop messages, open Settings, Messages to you, Change, Stop messages (those sent stay).

- Feedback: while the app is new, every page has a Feedback tab at the right edge of the screen, for anyone to say what confused them. It goes to the people who make the app, not to you; while the app is being tried out, a picture of the screen and a copy of the page go with it, and the form says so. For something about your competition, people use Tell the organiser (helpers Flag a concern).

- Approved coaches: where entries need sign-off, tick Coaches must be approved and choose the lowest coaching level you accept in each discipline (Level 2 to start with; British Gymnastics and Gymnastics Ireland levels count alike, and a higher level counts). Clubs then send their coaches with their qualifications. Coaches (with how many are waiting) lists them by club: open each certificate, see whether they meet your level, and Approve or say Not approved, with a note the club sees. Coaches named by gymnasts entering on their own are listed under Gymnasts on their own. Find a coach by name, club or status (approved, waiting, not approved, withdrawn) with the search above the list. Only approved coaches can sign off, and only their sign-offs count: an entry signed off by anyone else says so. Withdraw approval stops a coach's sign-offs counting, at once, with Undo in the note that says so; approving them again later, choose whether the sign-offs they gave before count again or only those from now on. Turning approval on when entries are already signed off asks first, saying how many entries it leaves waiting for a coach's sign-off. Approving a coach whose club sent no qualifications asks first too, at the top of the page, and after deciding you're back at that coach.

Remove or hold entries: tick entries in the tables (a table's header ticks them all; filter by club first to take a whole club), then choose Remove (they can't be sent or changed again until you restore them) or Hold, asking for changes (the club or gymnast changes the entry and sends it again, and you Accept back in), with an optional reason for the club, the gymnast or both. They're no longer counted, printed or timetabled, and are listed at the end under Removed and on hold, to Restore.

An entry marked Withdrawn was withdrawn after the club sent it. It isn't counted or printed, and goes when the club sends again. A competition and its entries are deleted 120 days after the competition date.

People

Tap People under Entries to see everyone at the competition in one list, each person once: gymnasts (and synchro partners), officials and coaches. A member who competes and judges is one row. The list shows their name, club and what they do ("Trampoline BUCS L7, Synchro BUCS L6/L7 · Judge, Chair · coaches 6"), with the number of people at the top. Type part of a name in Find a name, or narrow the list by club, by what they do (gymnast, official or coach) or by the level they can judge. Each choice says how many people it would leave, and one that would leave nobody is greyed out, so looking for a judge from a club for a level, you see at once whether there's anyone. The filters you've chosen are listed under the search: tap one to take it off. Clear shows everyone again.

Tap a name to see everything that person is doing, in one page for you to read (they can't be changed from it): their entries and the status of each card, with a link to the entry; what they offered to officiate, which events they may judge, whether they're marked qualified and their seats on the panels; the gymnasts they coach, each a link to that gymnast; and, once the timetable is published, their flight, where they are in it, whether they're here, any scratch warning and the desk messages sent to them, and the flights and panels they're in (Show the whole timetable shows everyone's). Names on the entries page, the Officials page and the Coaches page open the same page (on the entries page it's the small person link beside the name, and partner for a synchro pair). A member who also coaches is one row too, once their club has made them a coach too, or they've added their coach link to their page. Helpers' links that can see the entries page can see People, but not the venue screen link.

Officials

Open Timetable, then Officials. It shows, for each discipline, how many people can judge and chair against what one panel needs, and lists everyone: gymnasts who offered (clubs send their members' offers with their entries), and anyone you add.

- Add someone (at the head of the list) who isn't entering, such as a judge with no club: their name, club (if any), and what they can judge and help with.
- Tick Qualified for people qualified to judge; the page comes back to that person, saying what changed. Each person's judging qualifications show under what they offer, with a link to each certificate. Where only people you tick may judge, anyone offering to judge a discipline with no qualification in it is flagged ("No judging qualification for Tumbling").

- Under Panels and who may judge, each discipline's panel starts as the FIG Code of Points' (a Chair of Judges Panel, 6 execution and 2 difficulty judges) plus a recorder and a marshal; change any of it. Where there's no machine measuring horizontal displacement, give trampoline and synchro HD judges (2 for trampoline). Synchro has 2 Sync (synchronisation) judges to start with; set 0 if a machine measures synchronisation. A panel judges all of an event's flights, so every gymnast in it is scored by the same people; tick Recorders can change or Marshals can change to let those seats change between the event's flights. Choose who may judge: anyone as they offer, or only people you mark qualified. Judges offer HD and synchronisation at any level, and execution, difficulty and chairing each up to a level they choose; "up to" goes by the Order of levels on the Settings page. Write a note to those offering if you like (who you're short of, or that you'd rather people didn't judge their own level): it's shown above the form where they say what they'll do. To find people in a long list, type part of a name in Find a name, or narrow it by club, what they can do, the level they can judge (a level shows everyone who can judge it or a harder one) or qualified. Each choice says how many it would leave, greyed out if none; the filters chosen are listed under the search, each with × to take it off. Clear shows everyone again.

Plan the timetable

Tap Timetable, then Setup. Set up the venue first; every number has a starting value you can change. Each part is a line saying how it's set, with a Change button to open it.

1. Days: name each day and give its start and end time (when the venue must be empty of competition), and which areas are in use. Add a day for a competition over a weekend.

2. Areas: name each trampoline panel, tumbling track and DMT bed. Synchro runs on trampoline areas.

3. Timings: for each discipline, minutes per competitor (both rounds; 5 is a starting point for trampoline, 2½ per synchro pair, who do one routine, and 2 for tumbling and DMT), minutes between flights (warm-up and changeover), and the largest flight. Set the rest a person gets between their events (from the end of one flight to the start of the next one's warm-up), and whether it's a must. Someone with little rest goes early in their first flight and late in the next. Where men and women are ranked separately, choose which levels also fly apart: a small level can fly mixed.

4. Blocked time: add lunch, awards or an ad hoc event, at a fixed time or anywhere between two times, on all areas or chosen ones. An ad hoc event can say what officials it needs (a chair, judges, a recorder, a marshal), and gets them from the rota. Each event is all before a break or all after it, unless you tick Events can run across breaks: then an event too long to fit between breaks (five flights, say) pauses for lunch and finishes afterwards.

5. Rules: put an event on an area or a day, before another event, or apart from another, as a must or a prefer (e.g. Elite synchro must be on Panel 1).

6. Tap Plan, at the foot of Setup; the Timetable page then shows it. Each event is split into even flights with running orders drawn at random (keeping a club's gymnasts apart where that's easy), and each event's flights are placed back to back on one area, so one panel can judge them all, with flight 1 first. No one is in two places at once, each day ends on time and the musts are kept, then as many preferences as fit. The report shows when each day's flights end, when the day finishes (awards and other blocked time included), the time free after the last flight for more flights, anything that doesn't fit, anyone with too little rest, names that look like one person entered twice, and changes that would make it all fit (including capping an event's entries, or letting events run across breaks). Coaches aren't checked: where a coach's gymnasts are is for the coach and club to manage. Someone who is a member and also enters on their own (one person, with one link) counts as one person: planning keeps their turns apart, and the report says if they're short of rest. Planning also fills every panel from the people who've offered to judge and help (see Officials): never someone competing or on another panel at the time, and only in roles they may take. Each event's panel is filled once, with people free for all of its flights, and judges all of them. Clubs share judging their own gymnasts fairly.

7. Adjust manually: a flight's Move or redraw opens Move event, which moves all of an event's flights together to another day or area, Earlier, which swaps a flight with the one before it in its event, and Redraw order, which draws its running order again; a flight's Move a gymnast puts one of its gymnasts (choose who) in another flight, or takes them out. The timetable opens on one day (today's, on the competition's days, else the first), with a button for each day above it. On a phone they're tabs: tap a day to see it. On a bigger screen each button shows or hides its day, the days you choose side by side (scroll sideways if they don't all fit, or use ‹ and › to move an area at a time); the page remembers your choice. To find someone on a long timetable, type part of their name in Find a name: only the flights with them show, on whichever day. The area links under a day's name go straight to an area. If an event's flights end up apart, or either side of a break you haven't allowed, it's listed as a problem. Entries made after planning are listed for you to place. Changing the setup asks you to Plan again, on Setup. Open a flight's Panel to give a seat to someone else, for all the event's flights they had it for (the people who can take the seat you chose and are free then are listed first, marked ✓; those who could but are busy then, ◷; the rest, ×); Assign officials again redoes every panel and keeps the flights (it asks first, as your changes to the panels are lost). If someone with a seat withdraws, has their entry removed or changes their offer so they can't take it, the Officials line says so in amber ("1 seat problem"), naming them under Problems with the seats, and so does the top of Entries: give the seat to someone else, then publish again. Moving an event or a gymnast, or giving someone a seat, that would break something that holds now (someone in two places, a flight past the end of the day, one of your rules, rest where it's a must) asks first: Before you change it says what, people in two places first, offers other changes that break nothing (another day or area for the event, another of the event's flights for the gymnast, someone else free for the seat), and has Make the change anyway and Cancel.

8. Under Your rules, Officials: who does what says who does what, as a must or a prefer: e.g. Mary is Chair of judges at Elite Women, Tom doesn't officiate, Ann officiates only on Saturday from 12:00. Then tap Assign officials again.

9. Under Print: Marshal sheets and Chair of judges sheets (one area to a page, each flight with its panel), Score sheets for the recorders (a flight to a landscape page: each gymnast in running order, a box for each judge's mark of each routine, difficulty, penalty and totals, the paper copy beside the scores entered online; officials can also open their own panels' sheets on their phone from Score sheets for your panels, beside their duties), and The officials rota (each person's duties) for the noticeboard. On a phone, swipe a sheet's table sideways to see all of it. Panel timeline (in the Timetable menu, not under Print) shows every day side by side, a column per area, each flight and break with time running down evenly; Timeline with officials shows each area's day with a column for each seat on its panel and who has it. Print either (A3 landscape) or Download CSV for a spreadsheet. Once published, the sheets, the panel timeline and its CSV are of what's published, so the paper matches the phones and the venue screen. With changes not published, each has Use the draft instead: those print marked Draft · not published on every page (the CSV says so in its first line and its name). Before you publish, they're of the draft, marked the same way. A chair of judges' link always gets what's published.

10. Publish to show clubs, members and gymnasts entering on their own their flight, area and warm-up time, and officials their duties. After that, anything you change (planning again, moving flights or gymnasts, giving seats to officials, keeping a "what if") is a draft: everyone else still sees what you published until you tap Publish changes. The page says when there are changes not published yet, and What's changed since you published lists them (flights, gymnasts, panels, breaks), folded when there are many; Discard changes goes back to what's published, and Unpublish takes it down. Each asks first, on a page saying what it does, as does Plan again once the timetable is planned. What's been marked on the day stays when you change the plan: check-ins stay with each gymnast, and a flight keeps its times, who's up and its panel's check-ins when you move it, and when you plan again if it keeps the same gymnasts. A gymnast you move to another flight is checked in again there: their check-in clears when the move is published. Once the competition has begun, the timetable can't be planned again (what's run has run): change flights, gymnasts and seats by hand, or use the "what ifs". If publishing would drop anything (a flight that has run but is no longer in the plan, a panel check-in for a seat that's gone, or a checked-in gymnast moved to another flight), Publish changes says what first, and you choose Publish anyway or Cancel.

11. On the day (a button on the entries page once you've published; chairs of judges' and timetable links get it too): pick the day. Each area is a card saying how it's running, the flight it's on, who's up, how many are checked in, what's next, and the one tap that comes next (Started, Next gymnast, or Finished once the last routine is on). Tap the area's name or Open for its own page, where its marshal works: the flight on now, with Started at the top when it begins its warm-up, then who's up, Check-in and Panel, and Finished at the bottom when it's done (Undo takes back the latest tap), and Correct the times under that; then the area's later flights and those finished, each opening to the same. A marshal with one panel can keep its page open all day. Find a name on the overview shows who it finds and which area they're in. On poor wifi a tap may be sent twice; the second changes nothing. Planned and actual times sit side by side, and each area says whether it's "Running 15 min late", "On time" or early. Where an area is late, What if: see the rest of the day opens the delay page filled in. Gymnasts and officials see "Panel 2 is running about 15 min late" on their page once an area is 5 minutes or more out. Under each flight, Check-in lists its gymnasts: tap Here as they arrive, or Scratched for a no-show (Clear takes it back). Scratched gymnasts are struck through on the printed sheets, and if one also has a seat on a panel that day, or is still entered in other flights that day, the page says so under their name, with a link to "what if they leave". Tap Still officiating or Still competing once you know they're staying and the warning goes. It also goes by itself if another of their entries is checked in, and the gymnast can clear it from their own page with I'm here for the rest. Under each flight, Panel does the same for the officials: tap Here as each arrives (it counts for the whole run of that event on the area, and clears a scratch warning), or Missing, which links to "what if they leave". Once a flight's warm-up has begun, next to anyone who isn't here, Notify sends them, their club's comp sec and coaches, or both, a message saying where they should be. To find someone at the desk, type part of their name in Find a name: only the flights with them show, with their Check-in or Panel list open, and it stays that way as you tap Here. Each area's card has Open, which goes straight to that area's own page. What the colours mean. Each state is a small coloured label, the same on every page: grey not yet (not started, not checked in), blue under way or waiting on someone, green done (finished, here), amber needs a look (running late, a seat no one is in) and red out (scratched, missing). Each flight says Not started, Under way, Running late or Finished; the Check-in and Panel headings count who's here and who's out, and a Panel lists any seat that still needs someone. Marshals: who's up now. Once a flight is Started, its box shows who's first up. Tap Next gymnast as each gymnast starts their routine: the box shows who's on, their club and which routine it is (such as Set or Voluntary), and the venue screen shows them with the next two. Everyone does their 1st routine in running order, then everyone their 2nd, and scratched gymnasts are skipped. Back puts it right if you tapped too soon. When the last routine is on, Next gymnast becomes Finished: tap it once they're done. No signal? Keep tapping. Each tap is kept on your phone with the time you tapped it and shows straight away, marked "waiting to send", with "Waiting to send: 3 taps" at the top; once Started is tapped you can go on with Next gymnast and Finished. They're sent by themselves when the signal is back (keep the page open, or open it again), and recorded at the times you tapped them, even if your phone's clock is wrong. If two people tapped the same thing, the earliest Started and Finished count, and for Here or Scratched the latest tap does; the page says when a tap wasn't used and why. Taps more than 12 hours old aren't used. Correct the times (under each flight): if the paper sheet was used, or a tap was wrong, type when the flight really started and finished and tap Save times. Leave Finished empty if it hasn't finished. How late the area is running, the venue screen and everyone's pages follow, and the history says who changed them. Venue screen (in the menu, and a button at the top of the On the day page that opens it on the day you're looking at): what's on each area now and what's next, for a TV at the venue. On the Settings page make a Venue screen link, open it on the TV's browser and leave it: it keeps itself up to date, and that link can open nothing else. Each area has its own colour. Its card shows the flight on now and the next one, each with its gymnasts and their clubs, the warm-up time from the timetable, and how late the area is running. Each gymnast's running number (their place in the flight) is shown before their name, the same on every page and sheet, and it doesn't change when someone ahead of them is scratched. Once the marshal taps Next gymnast, the card shows who's on now, in large type, and the next two. Areas with nothing on soon shrink to a strip along the bottom. With two TVs, show some areas on each by adding them to the link, for example `…/screen?area=Panel 1&area=Panel 2`. If the TV loses its connection, it keeps showing the last update and says how old it is. To put a line across the top of every screen, use On the venue screen on the Desk messages page.

12. Desk messages (a button on the entries page, and a link at the top of On the day; chairs of judges' and timetable links get it too): send a message at once to a club, a flight (its gymnasts, its officials or both), all officials, one panel's officials, or people you pick (search by name or club to find them; people you've ticked stay ticked), and tick Ask them to come to the organisers' desk to call someone over. It is pushed and emailed straight away to those who asked to hear about changes, and shown in a "Messages from the organisers" box on each person's own page, so those who didn't still see it when they look. The page answers at once and says how many it's sending to; the sending carries on in the background (a message to a few hundred people takes a minute or so). The page lists what you sent and how many were told, are still to go, or failed: reload it to see how the sending is going.

What if there's a delay? (under Timetable, once planned): choose the day, when the hold-up starts, how many minutes and which areas (none ticked for all). It shows which flights now start later or move to another area, when each day's flights end, anything that no longer fits, and anyone needed in two places. Above those, This would break lists anything the delay breaks that holds now: an official on a flight during blocked time they're on duty for first, then your rules (an event's area, day, order or keeping two events apart; a person's hours or role) and short rest where rest is a must. One person's repeats show as one line, with how many more. A flight that moves to another area only goes where your must rules let it. An event's flights stay together: if one would no longer finish before a break, the rest of the event waits for it too (unless events can run across breaks), and an event moves to another area with all its flights still to come. Flights that have already run, or are under way, never move. Under Ease it, try what you'd do on the day: move, shorten or work through lunch on those areas, fewer minutes between flights, quicker turns, merging an event's flights into bigger ones, or letting the day run over; it shows what that buys against the delay alone. Nothing is changed unless you tap Keep this in the draft timetable, below what happens; then publish the changes when you're ready.

What if an official leaves? (under Timetable, once planned): choose who, the day and time they go, and whether for good. Each of their seats is filled for the rest of its event, by one person: someone free for all of it if there is anyone, the least busy that day first (then someone who's had that role already, then the least busy over the competition). If no one free can take it, others move round, as few as will do: a judge on the panel moving up to chair, or someone moving across from another panel, their seat filled in turn. Free means not competing, judging or on duty for blocked time then, rested where rest is a must, and allowed by your rules. Anything the result would break that holds now is listed above the seats. Nothing is changed unless you tap Keep this in the draft timetable.

Simulate (under Timetable) tries numbers before entries arrive, or alongside them, without changing your timetable. It starts from your entries and officials so far: change the entries per event, how many gymnasts there are in all (fewer than the entries means some enter several disciplines), the clubs, and how many people can judge, chair, record and marshal, then tap Simulate (once you have scenarios, New scenario opens the numbers). Under Judges each club must bring, say how many judges a club brings for every so many of its competitors in a discipline (e.g. 1 per 8, rounding up), and how many of them must be able to chair: the clubs' judges then come from that, and the judges above are only your own. Each discipline's judges are their own people, so a club needing 4 trampoline and 2 tumbling judges brings 6; say what percent of the clubs' judges can also judge other disciplines as well. Each scenario shows when each day's flights end, what doesn't fit and what would make it fit, how many judges the clubs bring, and how many panel seats no one could take, side by side with the others. Change starts a new one from its numbers; after changing the venue setup, Run again.

2. Run your club (comp secs)

1. Go to tariff.pardy.ie/competitions and tap New club. Give its name and tap Create club. Save the club admin link you're given: it can do everything, so keep it for setting the club up.
2. Open Members and share the Join link in the club's chat. Members join with it.
3. On Settings, make a role for each kind of help you have and a link for each person who helps, yourself too (see Roles and links). Use your own link from then on.
4. To enter a competition, open the club link the organiser gave you, choose your club (or paste its club admin link, or your own if your role can enter entries) and tap Enter the club. Members can then add their entries.

Your club page is in four sections, in a menu at the top: Competitions, Members, Coaches and Settings (only with the club admin link, or a role with Club settings). A link with a role shows only what it can do: without Send entries there's no Send, without Manage members no Remove, and so on; under the menu it says whose link it is. It opens on Competitions, a row for each competition your club is in, saying how many entries it has, how many are still to send or have problems, and whether the timetable is published or there's a message from the organisers. Tap one to open its page, which has its own tabs under the menu: Entries, Coaches (where it approves coaches), Judging and helping and Fees (where it charges). Your club's pages save their link in your browser each time you open them, so tariff.pardy.ie/competitions lists the club.

- Entries lists every member's entry (one per discipline they enter): its event, problems and status (Not sent, Sent, Changed since sent, or withdrawn), plus any note from the organiser, and missing videos and coach sign-off. Its problems are the ones the organiser sees: the card's, a missing coach sign-off where the competition needs one, and a synchro pair at the wrong level for their individual ones. Find a member with the search above the entries, or show only those with problems or still to send. Change, under a member's name, opens their entry: Change the entry sits above its card, by its problems, and Withdraw below it. To enter a member yourself, tap Enter a member, choose who and in what, and tap Enter them; for synchro, choose their partner from your members or type someone from another club. Synchro entries that gymnasts from other clubs made with one of your members are listed below, under Synchro as a partner. Where the competition needs a coach's sign-off and none of your coaches signs off routines, the page says so above the entries, with a link to Coaches to add one; an entry whose member's coach doesn't sign off says so on its row. Entries can still be sent: the organiser sees they aren't signed off.

- Send new and changed, above the entries with how many are still to send, sends the entries the competition doesn't have yet, or that changed since you sent them. Send all again, the quiet button beside it, sends everyone's and takes back withdrawn ones. The organiser only sees what you send, until entries close. What members offer to judge and help with goes with every send.

- Coaches (where it approves coaches): tick the coaches who'll sign off its entries (your members' coaches start ticked) and tap Send coaches. Each shows whether the organiser has approved them, with their note. If you change a coach's qualifications, send them again for the organiser to approve again.

- Judging and helping lists what each member offers to do; Change corrects it, and Add an offer adds one for a member who told you rather than adding it themselves.

- Fees says what's left to pay and how to pay first, then the invoice's lines (by gymnast) and payments; Print the invoice opens it to print or save as a PDF.

- Members (its own section): the Join link, then each member: choose their coach from the list, and the page comes back to their row, saying who their coach is now (your search and filters stay as they were). Under More beside them, give a member who lost their link a New link: the page asks first, as their old one stops working wherever it's saved, and then shows the new one, once, to send them (it opens only their pages at your club: they add their other links again), or Remove them (asked first, as their entries go with them). A member who also coaches needs no coach link: tap More, Make a coach too, and their member link opens their coach's page as well. Making that coach a link of their own (New link) parts it from the member. Synchro entries that gymnasts from other clubs made with your members are listed here too. To find a member, search by name or narrow the list by coach, entries, or coach too. A member who keeps routines on their page shows how many, and one with skills marked how many they can do: tap either to see them. Once your coaches have made levels, narrow the list by Level to see who has completed a level (by a coach's marks) or is working on it.

- Coaches (its own section; search by name, or narrow by who signs off and who has qualifications): tap Add a coach, type a name and tap Add coach, then send them the coach link shown (it's shown only then; More, New link makes another, asking first as the old one stops working, and Remove takes them off, asking first too). How many members chose each coach links to those members. Who coaches see, Change: tick Every coach sees every member if your coaches share everyone. Untick a coach's Signs off routines if they shouldn't sign off: they still see their members' entries. Under Add a qualification, choose each coach's coaching qualification from the list and add a photo or PDF of its certificate (up to 3 MB, four per coach, and 60 MB for the whole club), for competitions that ask for qualified coaches. Only you, and organisers you send the coach to, can open it; it's kept until you remove it or the coach.

- Tell the organiser: at the foot of a competition's Entries, to send its organiser a message from the club, about any of the club's entries, whole events, or the competition generally (how).

- Settings (its own section, for the club admin and a role with Club settings): the club admin's Roles and Links first (see Roles and links), then a row for each setting, with its button at the right. Members' skills, Change: Let every member see everyone's skills shares members' skills with the whole club (otherwise each member's are seen by them, their coaches and you). History, Show: what was changed through the club's links, when and by whom. Club admin link, Replace, and Delete the club, Delete, open to do it; replacing the club admin link asks first, as the old one stops working for everyone who has it (links with a role keep working), and deleting the club needs the word delete typed in a box. A club is deleted 13 months after anyone last used it (you, a coach or a member opening their page); Settings says when. Opened from people's own links lists anyone who added the club admin link to their own page (see One link for all your roles), with Remove; replacing the club admin link ends it for all of them.

Roles and links

The club admin link can do everything, so it's for setting the club up. For every day, each person who helps the club (you too) gets a link of their own with a role, which says what it can do; the history says who did what.

1. On Settings, under Roles, tap Make a role. Name it (for example Comp sec, Treasurer or Team manager), tick what it can do and tap Make the role. Every role sees the club: its competitions and entries, the members and coaches, timetables and the organisers' messages. Tick what else: Enter and change entries, Send entries, Fees, Manage members, Manage coaches, Certificates (tick it only for someone who needs coaches' and judges' certificates), Talk to the organiser and Club settings. A club can have 10 roles.

2. Under Links, tap Make a link, type who it's for, choose their role and tap Make the link. Copy the link and send it to them: it's shown only this once. A club can have 30 links.

3. A link's pages show only what its role can do. If someone needs more, open their role's Change, tick it and tap Save: it counts at once for everyone with that role. Or give them another role: tap Change beside their link, choose the role and tap Change role.

4. Remove, under a link's Change, stops it working at once (the page asks first). If it's lost, remove it and make another. A role can be removed once no link has it.

What's sent from a link says who sent it: feedback and messages to the organiser say "Mary (Treasurer), UCD", or "Club admin, UCD" from the club admin link. The club's messages to an organiser are seen and answered by every link that can talk to the organiser. Anyone can add their link to their own page (see One link for all your roles), and it opens the club as their role there.

3. Enter through your club (members)

1. Open your club's Join link, type your name and tap Join. Your own page opens; it's saved in this browser, so on this phone your entries are simply there.

2. Your page has five tabs. Competitions (the one it opens on) lists the competitions your club is in, each with its date and where your entries stand (for example Not entered, Saved, not sent yet, or Timetable published); tap one to open it. Routines has the routines you keep on your page (see Keep your routines on your page). Skills has the skills you're learning and can do, and your club's levels. Requirements has requirements you've written or saved. Your details has your personal link, to keep, Your coach to choose if your club has coaches (Change), and Your other links (see One link for all your roles).

3. A competition's page has a row for each discipline it offers, closed until you tap it: the discipline, your level and its status (for example Not entered, Checked, 2 problems, or Waiting list, 3rd). Open Trampoline (or Synchro, Tumbling, DMT), choose your Level, and Men or Women if asked. For trampoline, choose which set routine you're doing where there's a choice, and the routine for each voluntary from the routines kept on your page or saved in this browser (none yet? Open the Routine Builder → under it, build it, then ← go back to your entry); for synchro, just the pair's one routine, the level's voluntary. Add a video link if the competition asks (a YouTube video must be unlisted, not private; a Google Drive file shared with anyone with the link). Tap Save. Tumbling and DMT need only the level.

4. Your entry shows checked, with any problems; a row with problems to fix opens by itself when you save. Your comp sec sends it to the competition: the status says whether it's been sent, or changed since. Where it needs a coach's sign-off, it says who signs it off, or, if no coach of your club can, to ask your comp sec to add one.

Under Judging and helping, say what you can do at the competition: judge a discipline, or help as a recorder or marshal. Ticking Judge a discipline offers its HD (and in synchro, synchronisation) at any level; for Execution, Difficulty and Chair, choose no, any level, or up to a level, each on its own. Synchro goes with trampoline (Judge Trampoline and synchro): a synchro event by its hardest level, so up to ISTO Advanced takes in ISTO Intervanced/Advanced. Any note from the organiser is above the form. Your comp sec can correct it, and sends it with the entries. Below it, Your judging qualifications: tap Add a judging qualification, choose it and add a photo or PDF of its certificate. They're kept with you at the club for every competition; the organiser sees them with your offer, and if they approve judges, your page says once you're approved.

To change it, open the discipline's row, then Change your entry, above its card. To pull out of one discipline, tap Withdraw under the card, tick Withdraw this entry and tap Withdraw. Notes from the organiser and your coach show on your entry, and once the organiser publishes the timetable, your flight, area and warm-up time, and under Your duties when and where you judge or help.

My competition (the one link on the competition's page) is the page for the day: each of your events and its card's status, and once the timetable is published, your events in the order you warm up, each with your flight, where you are in the running order and about when each routine is, what you officiate, and the flights and panels you're in, each with its running order (Show the whole timetable shows everyone's, you picked out). It has your tabs and a link back to the competition's page. Once it's published, Your timetable (on My competition) shows it laid out like the organiser's panel timeline (days side by side, time running down evenly), with where you compete and the panels you sit on in green and the rest faint, opening on your first flight (Only these hides the rest, and the days, areas and hours with none of yours); Club timetable does the same for everyone in your club, naming who. The comp sec and coaches have Club timetable on their pages too. Each prints on A3. Add to calendar (and Club calendar) puts the same flights and duties in your phone's calendar; subscribe to it and it updates when the timetable is published again. Where there are more than two of these, they're in one menu, Timetables and calendars.

Tell me about changes tells you when the organiser changes something for you: when or where you compete, what you officiate, or your card (checked, a note, removed or on hold). Tick what to hear about, then:

- On this phone: tap Turn on notifications and allow them. On an iPhone or iPad, first add the page to your home screen (Share, then Add to Home Screen), open it from there and turn them on.
- By email (where it's on): give your email, tick that you're 18 or over (or that it's a parent's email), then tap the link it sends to confirm. The email says only "a competition on tariff.pardy.ie"; the page it opens names the competition.

You get one message for each round of changes, a few minutes after the organiser publishes, saying what was and what is now. The comp sec hears about all the club's members, and a coach about the gymnasts they coach. Every email has a link to stop them: it stops all the emails to that address about that competition. To see it all, open your page from the link you saved: messages don't carry your link, so they can't be used to open your page. Tapping one opens Competitions, which lists the links saved on that phone.

Tell the organiser

To tell the competition's organiser something (a question, or something to put right), tap Write beside Tell the organiser at the foot of your page for the competition or of My competition. It says who it's from, as the organiser will see it ("Ann Ryan, a member of UCD"): your name comes from your link, so there's nothing to type. Under About, tick any of your entries it's about, or none for the competition generally; write your message and tap Send to the organiser. The page says it's sent. You can send 10 a day; the organiser may also turn messages off.

Your messages are listed beneath, under Your messages to the organiser: each says Sent, then Received once the organiser has it, then Resolved, with their replies. Add to this answers them or adds more. If you've turned on Tell me about changes, you hear of their answers by push or email too.

It goes to the organiser only. Something wrong with the app itself? Use the Feedback tab at the right edge of the screen instead: that goes to the people who make the app.

Comp secs, coaches and gymnasts on their own have the same form: a comp sec at the foot of the competition's Entries (about any of the club's entries), a coach under each competition on Entries (about the gymnasts they see), and a gymnast on their own on their page for the competition and My competition (about any of their disciplines). A comp sec's and coach's list is grouped by event: tick an event's first box for all of the club's entries in it, or search for a gymnast or event when the list is long.

Mark your skills

Your page's Skills tab keeps track of the skills you're Learning and the ones you Can do. Find a skill under Mark a skill (type its name, like barani, or its FIG notation), or pick it from your club's own skills, the skills in your routines or the lists by type, and tap Learning or Can do: the page comes back to that skill. Tap Take off to remove it.

Under Levels, see how far you are through each of your club's levels: each part with your mark and your coach's. Parts about skills follow from the skills marked; a link of skills, or a set routine, you mark as a whole, and if one of your routines already does it, it says so.

Your coaches see your skills and mark them too. Your mark and your coach's both show, each saying who made it: say you mark a skill Can do and your coach marks it Learning, you'll see both, under Marked differently. Tapping a button changes only your own mark. If your club shares skills, you can see everyone else's too.

Keep your routines on your page

Routines you build in the Routine Builder are saved in that browser only. Keep them on your club page too, and they open on any phone, your coach sees them (and can leave you a note on each), and your comp sec can choose them if they change an entry for you.

- In the Routine Builder, tap More, then Save to my page. (It's there once you've opened your club page on this phone.) Your page opens on Routines, with the routine kept. Saving it again from the same phone changes it there.
- Or open Routines on your page: under Add routines from this browser, tick the ones to keep and tap Add to my page.
- Your coach can add routines to your page too: they show as added by them, and are yours to rename or delete.
- Tap a routine to see it checked, with any note from your coach. Open in the Routine Builder adds a copy to the builder on the phone you're using, to change and save again. Rename or Delete from your page (asked first; the builder's copy stays).

You can keep up to 30 routines.

Keep your requirements on your page

Requirements, set routines and levels you write on the Requirements page are saved in that browser only, and an iPhone can forget them after a week without a visit. Keep them on your page (a member's, a coach's, or your own if you enter on your own) and they're safe, and open on any phone:

- On the Requirements page, tap Save to my page beside one. (It's there once you've opened your page on this phone.) It shows On your page from then on, and saving it again there saves it on your page too.
- Or open Requirements on your page: Add from this browser keeps all of them in one go. Take off removes one from your page.
- Wherever your page is saved, the Requirements page and the Routine Builder's Check against list what's kept first, marked On your page.

You can keep up to 50 sets of requirements and 50 levels.

Synchro

Enter synchro like any discipline, and give your partner's name (and club, if they have one): any gymnast, from your club, another, or none. A pair does one routine: the level's voluntary. Your entry then shows a partner link: send it to your partner. They open it and confirm who they are with their own member page or entry link (or that they have no other entry; if they've used the app on that phone before, they choose themselves from a list), so the timetable never puts either of you in two places at once. If you name a different partner, they confirm again. Once they've confirmed, the entry shows on their own page under Synchro as a partner, and to their coach and their club's comp sec, even if their club isn't entered: checked, with its sign-off and, once the timetable is published, the flight. You (or your comp sec) still make any changes. Both your pages warn if the pair is at the wrong level for your individual levels.

A pair does the level they both compete at individually, or the easier of the two if they're a level apart; more than a level apart, you usually can't pair. If the organiser has paired synchro levels into one event (e.g. "BUCS L1/L2"), choose the level you're doing, e.g. "BUCS L1/L2 (doing BUCS L2)". The organiser sees a pair entered at another level flagged.

4. Sign off routines (coaches)

Your comp sec adds you and sends you your coach link (Your details shows it again, with your other links). Your page's Entries lists each competition with the entries you see: the members who chose you, those who haven't chosen a coach, or everyone if the club says so, each with the problems the organiser sees (a missing sign-off among them). If the club hasn't set you to sign off routines, you see the entries but can't sign them off. A competition that approves coaches says if you're waiting for its organiser to approve you (or why they haven't): until they do, you can't sign off its entries.

To find an entry, type part of a member's name in Find a name, or narrow the list by competition, level, problems or sign-off.

1. Tap a member to see their entry, checked.
2. Tap Sign off if you've seen them perform it safely and it's ready, or Not yet with a note of what needs to change. The next entry waiting for you at that competition opens, until there's none left.

If they change the entry, it needs signing off again. Where a competition needs sign-off, entries without it are flagged to the organiser.

Your page has two sections: Entries (the entries above) and Gymnasts: the members you see, with how many routines each keeps on their page and how many skills they can do (narrow it by Level to see who has completed a club level, or is working on it). Tap a gymnast to see their entries, each with its sign-off, and their routines, checked, and write Your note on any of them for them to see, such as what to work on. Leave it empty to take it off. A routine with skills no coach has marked Can do says how many, and names them: once you've seen them, tap each under Mark Can do, there on the routine. A closed routine that doesn't meet its requirements says how many it misses. To check a routine against another level, one of your club's or a competition's, choose it above the routine and tap Check. To give a gymnast a routine, build it in the Routine Builder on your phone, then on their page tick it under Add routines from this browser: it shows on their page as added by you, and adding it again from your phone updates it.

Club skills (the third section of your page) holds your club's own skills, for everyone to mark. To give a skill your club's name, find it under Name a skill, type the name (say Swivel Hips) and tap Save name: your club's pages then show that name. For anything else you track, like a drill, give it a name (and a note if you like) under Something else to track and tap Add. Removing something to track removes its marks too, so Remove asks first.

Levels (the fourth section) holds your club's levels, such as Club Grade 1, in order. Tap New level and write it there, as you would any requirements: a skill, a kind of skill (any back somersault), skills linked one after another (back drop, then back to feet), a number of them, or a set routine. (Requirements written on the Requirements page can be saved to your club's levels too, with Save to club levels beside them.) Rules about a whole routine, like its difficulty, are left out. A level can be any mix: under Add a skill, type to find a skill (or a kind of skill, or one of your club's own, like a drill or a handstand) and pick it; each is a line of its own, so a level of ten skills is ten picks. Or add another kind of rule adds several of a kind or a link. Each line shows its name; Change opens it. On Levels, put the levels in order, or Open in the Requirements page to change one and save it again.

To give a level to another club, open Share with another club under it and send the link to one of their coaches. They open it, choose their coach page (or paste its link, or their member page's if they're a member who coaches too) and tap Add to my club's levels: their club gets its own copy, with the club skills it tracks. No one's marks go with it.

From a gymnast's page, Skills shows what they're learning and can do. Mark skills for them the same way they do: your mark and theirs both show. A skill they've marked that you haven't marked the same has Confirm: tap it once you've seen it, and you mark it the same. Gymnasts lists how many each has to confirm.

To send a competition's organiser a message, use Tell the organiser under the competition on Entries (how).

5. Enter on your own

1. Open the competition's link for entering on your own from the organiser.

2. Choose the discipline at the top (where there's more than one), type your name, choose your Level (and Men or Women if asked), which set routine where there's a choice, and your voluntary from the routines saved in this browser, plus video links if asked. For synchro, give your partner's name. If you've entered on your own before, or you're a club member here, choose yourself under Who's entering? (or paste your page's link), so the entry joins your page; leave it blank the first time. Tap Enter.

3. You get your own page and its personal link, saved in this browser. Keep it: it opens every entry you make with it. Your page has Competitions (each competition you entered: tap one for a row per discipline, which opens to everything about that entry, with Change the entry and Withdraw, and Enter another discipline, under the same link and your name: it has a tab for each discipline you haven't entered, links to those you have, and ← back to the competition) and Your details (your link, and your other links). A withdrawn entry stays on your page, marked Withdrawn: Put it back enters it again, until entries close. On an entry, under Judging and helping, say what you can judge or help with: it's one offer for the competition, the same on each of your entries. Once the timetable is published, your entry shows your flight and, under Your duties, when and where you judge or help. My competition gathers all your entries (each discipline), times, your flights and panels, your timetable and calendar on one page (the whole timetable a tap away).

   Entered before, with a link for each entry? Each link still works and opens its entry on your page. Add the others under Your details, Your other links, so they're all on one page.

4. If the competition needs a coach's sign-off, send your coach the Sign-off link for your coach on your entry (open until they've signed it off; Show after that). They open it, check it and sign off with their name. If it approves coaches, first tap Name your coach under Your coach, with their qualification and a photo or PDF of its certificate (up to 3 MB), and tap Send to the organiser. Once the organiser approves them, the link works and they sign off as themselves; your page shows the organiser's decision and any note. Changing your coach sends them to be approved again.

To send the organiser a message, use Tell the organiser at the foot of your page for the competition (how).

6. One link for all your roles

If you're a member who also coaches, your club's comp sec, entering some competitions on your own, or helping run one, you can open all of it from one link. On your page's Your details, under Your other links, tap Add a link, paste another of your links and tap Add. Add only your own links: if the name on the link isn't yours (your coach's, say), the page asks first, as adding it makes you and them one person. Then tabs at the top (Member, Coach, Club admin or your club role, such as Treasurer, On your own, or the competition's) switch between them, whichever of your links you open. Each link listed has Undo.

- Only add links that are yours. Pasting a link is how you show it's yours, so there's nothing to approve.
- A shared link, such as your club's club admin link or a link the organiser gave a panel, opens from your page, but never opens your page: everyone else who has it sees only what it always showed. The club admin or organiser sees who added it, and can remove it; replacing it ends it for everyone.
- A link your club admin made for you with a role (Treasurer, say) opens the club as that role from your page, with a tab named for it, until the club admin removes the link.
- If your club makes you a coach too, there's no coach link: your member link opens your coach's page.
- If your club gives you a New link, it opens only your pages at that club: add your other links to it again. Whoever makes it sees it, so a link they make never opens your roles elsewhere.

What's kept

Only names, clubs, levels and events, men or women where asked, synchro partners, routines (with entries, and those members keep on their page), the skills members and coaches mark, with who marked them and when, the club's own skills and levels and the coach who added each, video links, the organiser's and coaches' notes, messages to the organiser and their replies, the names on a club's links with a role and the club's history of changes, and coaches' and judges' qualifications with their certificates where they're added. No birthdays or contact details; an email address only if you ask to hear about changes by email, until you stop them. Videos are never uploaded: only their links.

Feedback sent with the Feedback tab goes to the people who make the app, with the page it was sent from; while the app is being tried out, a picture of the screen and a copy of the page go with it, kept for 90 days.

Keeping your links safe

Competition entries are kept on the server. The links to them are saved in the browser, so copy any you'd hate to lose: clearing the browser's data, or using a private window, loses the saved links (not the entries). With all your roles on one page, keeping that one link is enough.

Pages you've opened on your phone still open without a connection, as they were when last loaded, for up to 30 days. A page whose link has been replaced or deleted is dropped from the phone the next time it's opened online.

If a bar says The app has been updated, tap Refresh.
