Trampoline Tariff Calculator · https://tariff.pardy.ie

Work out difficulty

- Tariff for any skill under the FIG Code of Points 2025–2028, from a tuck jump to a quadruple somersault. Each skill shows its name, its FIG notation (e.g. `8 2 3 /`) and its tariff.
- Three ways to add a skill: tap it in the picker (Jumps, Body landings, Singles, Doubles, Triples, each opening its skills when tapped); search by name ("barani", "back s/s", "rudy") or by FIG notation ("8 1 1 <"); or build it yourself from somersault, twists, direction, take-off and seat landing.
- Shape made easy: tuck, pike and straight are offered only where the shape changes the skill, and each shows how much it adds or takes away (e.g. +0.1 for a piked front).
- Your own labels: give any skill your club's name for it. The official name stays alongside it.

Build and check routines

- Routine total, counting only what the judges would count: the first ten skills, each repeated skill once, and nothing after an interruption.
- Problems flagged on each skill: a repeat, a take-off that doesn't match the last landing, a straight jump or impossible landing that interrupts the routine, a tenth skill that doesn't land on feet, and more than ten skills.
- As many routines as you like, saved on your phone, each with its own name. Reorder skills by dragging or with ↑/↓, remove one with ✕ (and undo it), and duplicate a routine to try a change.
- Change a skill where it is: Edit opens its card in the routine, which shows the change as you make it (another skill from a search, the shape, a label) until you tap Update.
- Side by side: show two routines together and edit both. In the second, skills that differ from the first are shaded, or turn the shading off.

Check against a competition

- Built-in requirements for ISTO (2025), BUCS (2026), FIG age groups (2025–2028) and British Gymnastics national (2026) and club & regional (2027) levels. Each names the rule book it came from.
- Find them quickly: Check against opens a list with a search, your own and the ones you used lately first, then each organisation's.

- Pass or fail for each requirement, with the skills that meet it highlighted, and special requirements starred.
- Your own requirements, for any competition the app doesn't know yet: required skills, banned skills, skill counts, linked skills, difficulty limits or caps. Start from scratch, or duplicate a built-in one and adjust it. The editor flags rules that contradict each other or can't be met.
- Choose what is scored: turn difficulty or the repeat rule off, or score only some elements (e.g. 2 in an AG3 first exercise) and pick which ones.

Levels and set routines

- Levels pair a competition's two exercises, such as "set routine option 1 or option 2, then a voluntary". You see the set routines exactly as prescribed, link your voluntary, and both are checked together.
- Carry-over: where the first exercise scores only some elements, their difficulty carries over, and the app flags them if they're repeated in the second exercise.
- Start from a set routine: copy any set routine into a routine and change it from there.
- Your own set routines: build one in the Routine Builder and save it as a set routine.
- Your own levels: choose the structure (a set routine then a voluntary, one or two voluntaries, or a set routine for both), then fill in each exercise from built-in or your own set routines and requirements.

Show, print and share

- View screen: a full-screen view of a routine, or of a whole level side by side, sized to fit without scrolling. Choose what shows: names, FIG notation, difficulty, requirements, warnings.
- Tariff sheet: a printable competition card with your details, elements in order, FIG notation, difficulty and the Req. * ticks. Print it or save it as a PDF.
- Compare page: two routines side by side, read-only.
- Share by link or QR code: send routines, requirements or levels to someone else's phone, from the Routine Builder or the view screen. Nothing is uploaded; everything travels inside the link.

Competitions and clubs

At https://tariff.pardy.ie/competitions (not linked from the calculator yet). To try it first, the sandbox is a copy full of made-up clubs and gymnasts, with a link for each role.

- Collect every card before the day. Organisers create a competition, and every entry arrives already checked against its level, with its problems listed.

- Clubs gather their members' entries. Members join with a link and keep their own entries; the comp sec sees them all and sends them, then re-sends what's changed. The club admin gives each helper a link with a role (Comp sec, Treasurer, Team manager: the club names them and ticks what each can do), and the club's history says who did what.
- Gymnasts without a club can enter on their own, if the organiser allows.
- Trampoline, synchro, tumbling and DMT. A gymnast can enter several; synchro pairs can be any two gymnasts, confirmed by a partner link. Tumbling and DMT entries are a level only, for now.
- The timetable: flights from the entries placed over the venue's days and areas, around lunch and other blocked time and the organiser's rules, never a person in two places and with rest between their turns; it says when each day finishes, what doesn't fit and what would. Adjusted manually, printed for marshals and the chair of judges, and published to clubs and gymnasts. Once published, it lists what you've changed since, before you publish again.
- Your competition: one page for each gymnast with their events, card status, flights, place in the running order, rough routine times, their judging and the flights they're in (the whole timetable a link away).
- The officials rota: every panel filled from the people who offered to judge and help, never while they compete, own-club judging shared fairly, your rules about who does what, printed and shown to each official. Judges offer each role (execution, difficulty, chair) up to a level of their own, and synchro is judged by trampoline's judges. Choosing who sits a seat, the list says who's free then and who's busy, and a seat whose holder can't have it any more (withdrawn, say) is flagged.
- For the organiser: one table per level with every problem (men and women apart where they rank apart), each entry in full, notes back to the club, printed competition cards, a CSV, and setting up in private, then opening and closing entries when you choose.
- Entry fees: an amount per entry for each discipline and a club fee if you have one, payments recorded as they come in, and an invoice for each club and individual.
- Limits and waiting lists: cap an event, and later entries wait their turn, moving up as places free.
- Late changes: the organiser chooses what may change after entries close (a level change, a routine change, or both), each with its own fee charged only if accepted, and whether a coach must sign it off first. Entries, changes and sign-offs can each close at their own time.
- Links for helpers: give those checking cards, chairs of judges, the timetable team, a venue screen or a co-organiser a link of their own; every change is listed in a history, and anyone with a link can flag a concern.

- Tell the organiser: members, coaches, comp secs and gymnasts send the organiser a message from their pages, named, and about any of their entries or whole events if they choose; it joins the concerns on the organiser's page. The organiser marks it received, replies and resolves it, the sender sees each and can add to it, and the organiser can turn messages off.
- Feedback: a tab at the edge of every page, for anyone to tell the people who make the app what confused them, with a picture of the screen and a copy of the page while it's being tried out.
- Score sheets: printed for the recorders, a flight to a page, and on each official's phone for their own panels.
- Tell me about changes: a push on your phone or an email when the organiser changes when or where you compete, what you officiate or your card. Add to calendar puts your flights and duties in your phone's calendar.
- On the day: flights marked started and finished, with how late each area is running shown to everyone; check-in and scratches for gymnasts, and chairs checking in their panel; Find a name to find anyone at the desk; a Notify button for anyone not there; messages from the organisers' desk to a club, a flight, the officials or anyone you pick; and a venue screen showing what's on each area now and next.
- Works offline: pages you've opened still open without a connection, marked with when they were last loaded.
- Video proof by link, for chosen skills or whole routines: never uploaded.
- Coach sign-off: clubs add their coaches, and each coach signs off their members' routines on their own page. An organiser can accept only approved coaches: clubs send their coaches' qualifications and certificates, and the organiser approves each.
- Judges' qualifications: members add theirs, with a certificate, and the organiser sees them with their offer to judge.
- Skills and club levels: members mark the skills they're learning and can do, coaches mark them too and confirm, and a club writes its own levels and skills to track, and shares levels with other clubs.
- Routines and requirements on your page: keep them on your club or own page, so they open on any phone and your coach sees them, with notes.
- What if: see what a delay or an official leaving does to the rest of the day, and Simulate numbers before the entries come in.
- People: everyone at the competition in one list, each person once, with all they're doing.
- No accounts: everyone gets a private link, saved in their browser.

- One link for all your roles: a member who coaches, a comp sec, a gymnast entering on their own: add your other links to your page and one link opens them all, with a tab for each. Entering on your own, all your entries are on one page.

Good to know

- No account. The calculator saves everything in your phone's browser. Clearing the browser's data deletes it, so share or export what you want to keep. Competition entries are kept on the server, reached by private links, and deleted 120 days after the competition.
- Built-in rules can go out of date. Check them against your competition's current rules.
- The app tells you when it has been updated, with a Refresh button.

See the routine builder guide and the competitions guide for how to do each of these.
